Administrative Order
No. ~~2013-0016~~ by 2006-0004-C

SUBJECT: Amendment of Administrative Order No. 2006-0004, as amended, hereby requiring only the Certificate of Need (CON) to new government hospitals and providing additional requirements for new general hospitals.

I. RATIONALE

On March 16, 2004, the Department of Health issued Administrative Order No. 2006-004, entitled "Guidelines for the Issuance of Certificate of Need to Establish a New Hospital". The primary reason for issuing said Administrative Order was to address the maldistribution of hospital beds resulting in inaccessibility and inadequacy of the hospital delivery system in most regions of the country since most hospital beds are clustered in the urban areas.

To address such inadequacy, the Department of Health issued Administrative Order No. 2006-004, as amended by AO No. 2006-0004A & B, better known as the Guidelines for the Issuance of Certificate of Need to Establish a New Hospital, by regulating the establishment of new hospitals.

Since 2004 however, it has been observed that there was no significant increase of hospital beds in rural areas. Private individuals and corporations were hesitant to establish hospitals in most regions where market forces could not guarantee a reasonable return of investment. The Certificate of Need requirement has been identified as a major deterrent in private sector investment in the hospital sector.

Recognizing the need to evaluate the previous strategy, the Department of Health deemed it necessary to revise the current requirement of Certificate of Need. The private individuals and corporations who will establish new hospitals will not be required anymore to secure a Certificate of Need and they may establish new hospitals based on their own assessment but still subject to existing rules and regulations on the standards of the hospital and other health facilities. The Department of Health as well as the local government units should instead focus on their respective health initiatives and evaluate the necessity of establishment of hospitals within their area of responsibility to maximize government resources.
